WHY PUPILS FAIL

tary schools of a certain town failed to pass of fire-prevention. their mid-year examinations. Parents rose in their wrath and denounced the schools. The principal replied that the failures almost without exception were due to "lack of study,] irregular attendance, absolute indifference, picture shows, dances and parties."

The school systems of the state concerned are noted for their excellence. Among them the schools of the town referred to rank high. The teachers are said to be second to none in the country. When schools fail under such a system, as a rule it is for lack of co-operation by the parents and children.

The principal will have no trouble in substantiating his charges regarding the outside activities of the children. It is not difficult to prove which pupils in a community lead wholesome, quiet lives, conducive to good scholarship, and which lead the other kind. The difficulty comes in proving to foolish, indulgent parents the true relation between the child's outside diversions and his school work Parents who are inclined to blame the schools for the failures of their offspring would do well to look facts in the face.

THE PUBLIC COUGH

There has been a good deal of mik lin winter about the evil of coughing in public places. It is not only extremely annoving to those who want to hear wind i going on but it spreads disease. Telling people that they do not have to comb done have seem to do much good. Mr. Coue with stop it, but he cannot be present in every audience.

An actress, however, seems to have solved the problem.

She reminds people that they can stop an incipient sneeze by pressing their finger-tips against their upper lips, just below the nostrils. Similarly, she says, they can keep themselves from coughing by pinching the throat-that is to say, the larynx-between the thumb and forefinger, increasing the pressure slightly as the desire to cough increases, and massaging the throat with a slightly rotary motion. The tickling sensation, she ays, will stop almost invariably. Respectfully recommended to all who attend shows, concerts, lectures and church services.
